

International Seminar

Global populism, social inequalities and disfigured democracy

January 18, 2019

Room R 016, Magdaleny Rettigové 4, Prague 1

Global Populism: lessons from the South

Carlos de la Torre, University of Kentucky

Towards a theory of neopopulism

Paolo Graziano, University of Padova

Structural Transformation and the Politics of Inequality

Peter Kingstone, King's College

Transnational populism, constitutional resistance, and constituent politics

Paul Blokker, University of Bologna

The political theory of populism

Nadia Urbinati, Columbia University

INSTITUTE
OF SOCIOLOGICAL STUDIES
Faculty of Social Sciences
Charles University

Program

Global populism, social inequalities and disfigured democracy

9:00 Institutional welcome

Zdeněk Uherek, Director of Institute of Sociological Studies, Faculty of Social Sciences, Charles University

9:15 “Global Populism: lessons from the South”

Carlos de la Torre, University of Kentucky

Chair Ondřej Císař, Charles University

Discussants: Manuel Anselmi, Charles University and Carlos Waisman, University of California San Diego

10:15 “Towards a theory of neopopulism”

Paolo Graziano, University of Padova

Discussants: Martin Mejstřík, Charles University and Kristián Šrám, Charles University

11:15 Coffee Break

11:30 “Structural Transformation and the Politics of Inequality”

Peter Kingstone, King's College

Discussants: Francesco Antonelli, University of Roma Tre

12:30 Discussion and Conclusions

13:00 Lunch

14:30 “Transnational populism, constitutional resistance, and constituent politics”

Paul Blokker, University of Bologna

Chair: Carlos Waisman, University of California San Diego

Discussants: Petr Agha, Charles University

15:30 “The political theory of populism”

Nadia Urbinati, Columbia University

Discussants: Carlos de La Torre, University of Kentucky, Paolo Graziano University of Padova

16:30 Discussion and conclusions

